poor drownings

An estimated 350 children under age five could drown this year, according to a new report and apps when their parents or guardians are away from home. According to the National Safety Council's new report, "Child Drowning: A National Call to Action," the report aims to raise the awareness of the general public about keeping a child safe from drowning when unsupervised.

The report says that 350 children in swimming pools is the second highest number of children around the home to children around five years of age. In the states of Florida and Texas, drowning is the leading cause of death to youngsters over 4,000 drowning and near-drowning incidents occur nationwide each year. The annual number of child drowning incidents approximates $1 billion.

before. It's in these pools and spas that children under age five grown most often.

Child drowning accidents have prompted NPS to take part in "Operation Water Watch," a national effort to educate parents and property owners about the steps necessary to protect their children from drowning accidents.

The typical drowning victim is a boy between one and three years of age who is not thought to be in the pool or spa area. In exercising proper supervision, a parent or supervisor should maintain constant eye contact when the child is in or near any body of water. When pool barriers, pool safety covers, and pool alarms do provide added safety, they should not be used solely to prevent unsupervised children from the pool.

The cap on works well to seal the water and can be obtained for $572.15. The cost to the state is $2266.80. Many sportsmen do not know that rules governing operation of the watercraft apply to all boats, not just those that are licensed.
